Continuation of the Examination in Chaincering—The Ethics and Law Ordent-The Cudet Memorial—The War Record of the Class—A

WEST POINT.

Letter from Henry Ward B'echer. COZZENS' P.OTEL, June 3, 1869. The examination of the graduating class in engineering was completed this morning, and the first section in ethics and law passed the ordeal of the cross-questionings of the Examining Board during The authorities from which th cadets unbibe all their inspiration as to this special course of their studies are Halleck's International Prench's Practical Ethics, Kent's Commentaries (that portion which relates exclusively to constitutional law), French's Law and Military Law, and Benet's Military Law and the Practice of Coarts Martial. Now, although the members of the sections which were called before the Board to-day passed a very satisfactory examination indeed, it can be said that this branch is not studied with all that care which its great importance would seem to demand. No one man in any profes-sion, with the exception of the legal profession itself, stands in greater need of a thorough knowledge of law, civil as well as military, than he who may, at some time or other, be called upon to assume a semi-judicial power over his fellow citizens; and there were times during our late war when West Point graduates might have done more honor to themseives and greater service to the cause of right and justice than they did had they shown by their acts that they had not studied law at the Academy in much the same way that parrots are taught to utter certain phrases without understanding their meaning. Yet, in justice to the faculty, it must be conceded that in point of importance this course is classed second to engineering only. This being so, how this branch is not studied as it should be may be a mystery to some people, but it certainly is not to those who ever heard a graduating class examined in "Ethics and Law."

THE WAR RECORD OF THE GRADUATES.
In a previous letter I made mention of the fact that several members of the present graduating class were ex-soldiers—young men for whose special benefit at the close, or rather just before the final collapse of the rebellion, a special law was passed in Congress, allowing worthy "veterans" not over twenty-lour years of age to enter the Academy, Strange as it may seem, this apparent inroad upon the staid old rules and regulations, which before the war shut out all young men over twenty-two years of age, was actually fought, tooth and nail, by certain old fogies who pretended to have the interests of the Academy—and particularly their own—very much at heart; but the law passed, and the consequence has been that ever since the days of the class of '60 the great armies which fought the battles of the war have been represented by one or more graduates every year. The class of '60 up to its third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but six of them, who had managed to fight successfully through many a battle, were forced to retreat from West Point discomitted the law passed, and the consequence has been that ever since the days of the class of '60 to great armies which fought the battles of the war have been represented by one or more graduates every year. The class of '60 up to its third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but third year had no less than fourteen ex-soldiers; but there were forced to retreat from West Foint discomfited and no doubt disguised. As I have already made only a mere mention of the "veterans" that remain I now give their record during the war in full:—

THE CLASS MEMORIAL.

It has been a time-honored custom with every graduating class to select some appropriate memorial as a sort of remembrance in after years of their West Point days, and the class of 1808 has not been beaund in this particular. It has not followed the example of that weit known class which selected a silver gobilet as their memorial, and what was given to the member who was able the first to say that a child did not call him "out of his name" when he called him "father;" but it has chosen a finger ring of very beautiful workmanship. It is of soind gold, very heavy, and has on one side, in raised work, the head of Mars, and on the other the head of Minerva. On the seal the figures "60" are deeply engraved, and in such an ingenious manner that no matter which way the ring is put on the finger the figures appear the same, in very delicately carved lettering the motto of the class—"Taim Marte quain Marser's"—surrounds the figures, setting of the beautiful advantage the sardonyx stone in which the figures are engraved. In addition to this memorial each member of the class has obtained a magnificent sibum, which contains the caries de sizele of all the members of the class and the most picturesque views of the Academy grounds and noghorhood. There are two cartes in every "picture" page and one view on every page devoted to the "scenes at West Foint." The motto of the class and 199 are impressed on the covers, after the fashion of the address or the graduates, will be delivered by Henry Ward Be cher. It has been delivered by Henry Ward Be cher. Response—so mote it be!

The Grand Lecturer made his report, in which he recommended some alterations in the constitution, to meet existing wants. He also stated that the lodges, throughout the jurisdiction, were in possession of the standard work, as prescribed by the Grand Lodge in 1869, and that he had held seven conventions, which were largely attended. Masters of lodges, however, did not generally approve of conventions, as they interfered with their time to a great extent. The report was subdivided, one portion (the last) being referred until their time to a great extent. The report was subdivided, one portion (the last) being referred to the Committee on Work and Lectures, and the other to the Committee on Constitution and Laws.

The Committee on Hall and Asylum then reported, staining that the spot selected, opposite booth's theatre, was unexceptionable. It had cost $340,000, and there is a mortgage thereon of $87,500, which with a small balance due the Grand Secretary, amounting to $65, is the whole amount due on the property. To meet this there is a mortgage on the Grand and crosby street property of $85,500, which becomes due on the last of May, 1870, and computing the interest on each there will be due on that date the small sum of $0,400. The debt can be paid—1. By a per capita tax received at the Grand Secretary's office—$22,000; 2. Rent of Sixth avenue property to May 1, 1870—$17,000; 3. Estimated per capita tax for 1869-76—$22,000; which will meet the balance of the debt and leave more than $64,000 to commence building operations. The cost of the building will be from $200,000 to $300,000 and a loan of $200,000 will be effected to meet this cost. The interest, taxes, insurance, &c., will be about $22,000 per annum, certainly not more and very probably less; the income will be self-liquidating.

Resolutions were added which approved the ac-will be errorn $30,000 to $40,000 annually; so the debt will be self-liquidating.

Resolutions were added which approved the action of the trustees in purchasing that site; also instructing them to commence building immediately after May 1, 1870, and directing them to have the corner stone laid during the next communication if possible, and authorizing the committee to adopt such plans as they might desire in connection with the corner stone celebration.

The R. W. JOHN H. ANTHON took exception to the words "instruct" and "authorize." He said that the

that the obnoxious words should be stricken out, and the word "advise" inserted in lieu thereof.

This ied to a long detate, which culminated in the report being sent back to the committee with instructions to make the alterations asked for. On their return they reported that they had compiled with the instructions of the Grand Lodge.

The resolutions were then adopted and the Grand Lodge was called to refreshment until nine o'clock this morning.

Meeting at the Brooklyn Athenaum. The Cuban Ladies' Relief Association had an enter-tainment last evening at the Brooklyn Athenaum for the purpose of raising funds to aid the sick and wounded in the Cuban army of liberation. The attendance was not as large as might have been anticipated, but there was no inconsiderable number present of dark-haired Cuban men and women. The orchestra started the proceedings of the evening with an overture from "Decuter and Bauer,"

The orchestra started the proceedings of the evening with an overture from "Decinter and Bauer," which was very effectively rendered. Mr. William Parsons, a gentleman with a decidedly English accent, then came forward and selivered a discourse of over an hour's duration, upon "Cuba, her past, present and future."

He drew an eloquent sketch of Christopher Columbus landing upon the soil of Cuba over three centuries ago and mistaking it for the empire of Cathay. He then passed along to the consideration of the present of Cuba: its grand uprising for liberty and the great responsibility that rested upon this republic in seeing that the weak and lowly Cubans are secured from the sangumary tyranny of Spanish persecution. The future of Cuba the speaker painted in very glowing colors. Under the shelter of the American republic, and, mayhap, one in the great family of free and sovereign States, its resources would be speedily developed—its latent riches brought to light, and taking a position between two great continents, while holding the key to a vast line of seaboard, would undoubtedly form the brightest gem in the entire constellation of the Union.

After Mr. Parsons' lecture, which was frequently applauded, the orchestra played the overture of the "Czar und Zimmerman." A tableau entitled "Cuba in bondage" was next presented to the audience. The young lady who impersonated the enchained spirit of Cuba was uncommonly beautiful and vivaelous. Selections from "Faust" followed. A tableau of "A Cuban Warrior" and one of "Cuba as it si," with smoking roof trees and grim death piving his hideous mission were very well rendered. A song from Mendelssohn, another tableau of "Cuba as it will be," and the "Schuetzen March," completed the evening's programme. Conspicuous among the Cubans present were Schuetzen March," completed the evening's programme. Conspicuous among the Cubans present were Schuetzen March," completed the evening's programme. FIGHT IN A CHERRY STREET SALDON.

Last night, about eight o'clock, a serious fight, in which men and women mingled promiscuously, ocwhich men and women mingled promiscuously, oc-curred in the lager beer saloon of John Besser, No. 90 Cherry street. Like all rows of this character, beer glasses were hurled with extreme recklessness about the room, and one of them, intended for the cranium of Charles Peterson, struck Margaret Breen, a little girl but eight years of age, on the back, in-licting a severe but not dangerous wound. Ellen Besser, Margaret Besser, Thomas McCabe and Jere-miah Ryan, who were recognized as ringicaders in the row, were arrested and locked up in the Fourth precinct station house.

Ernest William Hengstenberg. On yesterday this celebrated theologian died at Bonn, as we are informed by a cable telegram, in the sixty-seventh year of his age. He was born at Frændenberg, on the 20th of October, 1802, his father Frondenberg, on the 20th of October, 1802, his father being a Protestant clergyman of that place, and received an excellent education at Bonn, the Oriental languages and philosophy being among his studies. For translating an Arabic work of the sixth century he received high distinction from his university, and in 1824 added greatily to his reputation by his editing the first part of Aristotle's Metaphysics. During the same year he became a private teacher of philosophy, and in 1825 qualified as teacher of theology. Four years later (1829) he became a Professor and Doctor of Theology, and has ever since ranked with the leading theologians of the day. Dr. Hengstenberg's Commentaries on the Apocalypse and the Psalms are among the most prominent and best known of his works. He also edited the Ecangelische Kirchen Zeitung from 1827 until his death.

Dr. TIFFANY said his attention was first called to the subject of lay delegation by the study of the New Testament. He had become thoroughly satisfied by that study. That to make the Church in the nineteenth century what it was in the first century but one thing was needed, and that was lay delegation. The Methodist Church, like the early Church, had ministry; in a word, all that the primitive Church had the Methodist Church had to-day, excepting that the people who composed the Church had nothing to do with the management of the Church. Draw the composed the Church had nothing to do with the management of the Church. Draw the composed the Church had nothing to do with the management of the Church. Draw the proceeded to controver some of its statements and to show the want of foundation of some of its assumptions. The first thing about the pamphlet that was objectionable was the assumption that the friends of lay delegation believed the Methodist Church, as it now is, was wrong. When the missionary society was organized did they who organized it consider the Church was remark the Church thought to be wrong? When schools and colleges for the training of the young were introduced in the Church was the Church thought to be wrong? When schools and colleges for the training of ministers were introduced was it thought to be wrong? The question was not whether Methodism was right or wrong, but whether a thing that was right or wrong, but whether a thing that was right or wrong, but whether a thing that was right in tiself might be improved. All who favor isy delegation do so as an improvement. The antagonists were those who favored the old ry. "Let wet enough atoms of the length of time that a minister should remain at a church were changes made by ministers themselves. The pamphlet stated that the question came before the Church "without the endorsement of the General Conference or the bishops." The way that the stated that the question came before the hydrogeneous the construction of the pamphlet, that lay delegation was urred on the ground. The imm who had not only the pamphlet was the church of the pamphlet, that lay delegation was urred on the ground. The imm who had not only the pamphlet, that hay delegation was urred on the ground. The imm who had not to represent the laity. A Methodist, It was said, do not not represent the laity. A Methodist, It was said, could set in the House of Representatives, be a Go have no objection to the scheme on that score. The speaker then showed the groundlessness of the charges as to the expense and magnitude of the cost of the Conference should lay delegations be introduced. He was strongly in favor of all the branches of Methodism, and these different bodies were not so small as might be supposed. These branches of the Methodist Church numbered one million two hundred thousand. In all these different branches lay representatives were established. He saw no way by which union could be established so readily as by the adoption of lay representation, as it would remove one great obstacle to minon. Bisnop Simpson, in conclusion, said that he was giad to find that women were to vote on this important question, and when they shall have done so he thought they would find that their votes would count as much as the noisy politicians if transferred to a different field. The meeting then broke up.

STABBING AFFRAY IN BROCKLYN.

Michael Fernandez, twenty-three years of age, a pedier by occupation, residing at No. 207 Gold street, Brooklyn, was arrested last night about qualf-past ten o'clock on charge of stabbing Michael McNalley. The prisoner, it appears, had quarrelied with McNalley during the day, and had procured a warrant for his arrest. Last evening both men met outside the residence of Fernandez, when a fight took place, and the accused stabbed his adversary with a dirk knile in the right side, indicting a dangerous wound. The act was wilnessed by officer Currane, of the Forty-first precinct, who gave chase to Fernandez as the latter fied towards Myrile avenue, and succeeded in arresting him in a saloon in which he sought refuge. He was taken to the Washington street station house and locked up for examination. The police state that both parties bear a bad reputation. The injured man was conveyed to the City Hospital, at the advice of Dr. Regan, who examined the wound and pronounced it to be dangerous. edler by occupation, residing at No. 207 Gold street.

THE WILLIAMSBURG THAGEDY.

Coroner Whitehill and a jury took testimony last night in the case of Isaac S. Waters, charged with shooting and killing his brother-in-law, Jeremiah Strickiand. The inquest was held at the residence, 48 South Second street. The testimony of James Hyer, Miss Sarah A. Warts and Mrs. Hannah Hyer was taken, but no additional facts were electied. At about eleven o'clock the jurymen induced the Coroner to take them to the residence of Mrs. waters, the wife of the homicide, to take testimony additional to that given by her, as published in the Herraldo. The physician of Mrs. Waters informed the jurymen that she was in an advanced state of pregnancy, and was at the hour mentioned lying in a critical condition. He thought that if the jury entered her chamber at that lake hour serious consequences would result. The jurymen, however, were determined to see the ladv, and the Coroner consented. The inquest will be continued this afternoon. shooting and killing his brother-in-law, Jeremiah
